

Rubicon State Forest, February 2017

Aerial photography © Environmental Media Foundation Inc.

The survival of these majestic montane ash forests in the Central Highlands of Victoria is now critically threatened by industrial scale, clear-fell logging.

Does this meet community expectations of ecologically sustainable logging consistent with the Regional Forest Agreement?
What are the short and long-term impacts on biodiversity, recreation, tourism and local communities?

